Bill and Shirley Edwards
S.B. Farms

Perhaps no animal in the history of any nation has played a more important role than the Bison, or American Buffalo. The Bison was the most important animal on the American plains and prairies. He even surpassed the mustang and the longhorn cattle in importance. As a social factor, the Bison's influence on Native American Indians and the white man alike was tremendous.

Bill and Shirley Edwards started S.B. Farms in 1995. Care is taken to use as many best management practices as possible to not only provide a safe and healthy environment for the Bison, but to also control nutrient and soil runoff into the Choptank River and thence the Chesapeake Bay. The Edwards family were members of the Chesapeake Bay's Choptank Tributary Strategies Team for the first five years of its existence. The Dorchester County ranch uses rotational grazing and has established pastures that include native warm-season grasses.

The Bison are provided the best of care and are raised without the use of antibiotics, growth stimulants, or hormones. They are primarily left to graze the adequate pastures, with each pasture having its own fresh water source. The Bison cows have been carefully selected from established, renowned herds, many of them having placed first, second, or third in the East's premiere Bison Show and Sale.

The S.B. Farms mission: To market healthy, all natural products. Our Bison will be raised without the use of antibiotics, growth stimulants or hormones. We will promote Bison and the Bison industry and provide a clean, healthy and safe environment while doing it. See our website at <http://www.sbfarmsinc.com>
